

HATCHET BURIED, THOMPSON WON'T FIGHT WHITMAN

Senator Not a Candidate for Governor—Phone-Tapping Inquiry Goes On.

FEAR OF "DYNAMITE."

Mayor Mitchel, Questioning Authority of Committee, Has Asked First Hearing.

Senator George F. Thompson, whose Public Service investigating committee may or may not inquire to-day into the tapping of telephones in connection with the investigations of the State Charities Department, issued a statement last night indicating that Gov. Whitman and he have buried the hatchet, presumably to promote Republican harmony. For more than a year they have been politically unfriendly.

In the newspapers yesterday the Senator was quoted as saying, after talking on Gov. Whitman at the St. Regis Hotel, that he would favor Mr. Whitman's re-nomination, provided he, Thompson, was not suggested as the gubernatorial candidate.

"I am not a candidate," said Mr. Thompson last night, "nor have I ever considered the matter. Any other assertion would be erroneous. Further than that, it would be egotistical for me to presume to be a candidate against Gov. Whitman. At present I am most concerned with the investigation of the Public Service Commission. The Governor and I discussed this investigation, in which he is interested. I am confident that no misunderstanding exists between the Governor and myself."

The investigation of telephone tapping, scheduled for to-day, may not take place, for several reasons. Mayor Mitchel contends the committee lacks authority. However, he has asked to be heard first if the committee persists. Some committee members fear the subject is charged with dynamite and say it is no legitimate concern of theirs.

This week Brooklyn Rapid Transit officers may attempt to put on the committee's record a statement to combat an inference at Friday's meeting of the Board of the subway contracts. Mr. Swanstrom, who carried to President Williams of the B. R. T. the intimation that $500,000 would influence the vote of a member of the Board of the subway contracts, the railway men aster, died fully a month before the alleged discussion regarding "influence money" took place.

EX-SHERIFF MELODY DIES.

Fought McCarren as Brooklyn Democratic Leader.

Former Sheriff William E. Melody, Democratic leader of the Fourth Assembly District of Kings County, died to-day in the Bushwick Hospital after an illness of ten days. He was operated on a week ago for intestinal trouble.

Mr. Melody was sixty-six years old and lived at No. 179 Hooper Street, Brooklyn. He was a member of the Board of Assessments and Arrears. He was a leader of the movement to elect McCarren. His brother, Daniel Melody, who is connected with the Department of Health, and his wife and daughter, survive him.

One of the last stories from the pen of the late Richard Harding Davis, entitled "Somewhere in France," will appear complete, illustrated in color, in next Sunday's World Magazine. Competent critics have described this swift-acting triumph of fiction as the best of the well-known correspondent's war stories. Colorful with all the sidelights of crafty modern warfare, "Somewhere in France"—the powerful narrative of an intriguing woman spy—may even have been founded on facts revealed to Davis upon his last trip to the front. A real literary treat in the four pages devoted to this exceptional work of an exceptional writer will await readers of The World Magazine next Sunday.

BENEFIT NETS $6,000 FOR SUMMER CAMP OF THE CITY'S NEWSBOYS

Broadway's "Best" Helps Out Hippodrome Performance Arranged by Managers.

There is but one way to describe last night's performance in the Hippodrome for the benefit of the Newsboys' Summer Camp at New Dorp, L. I. Picture to yourself the biggest theatre in New York packed to the doors with 4,000 enthusiastic persons, the biggest stage jammed with celebrities, and the biggest lobby filled with pretty girls selling programmes. The attendance meant in the sale of seats and programmes a profit of approximately $4,500. In addition, the advertisements in the programmes brought $1,500, so it was estimated the gross receipts would total something over $6,000, which will send a good many boys to the shore. Each will have two weeks at the camp.

Will Rogers was the announcer. "Here is an unusual treat," was one of his announcements. "This gentleman never appears in benefits and has never been seen before on the American stage."

Then introduced Nat Williams known as "the Benefit King," because of the number of times he appears without pay. The entertainers were drawn from all the musical shows on Broadway, from vaudeville and from motion picture companies. Some of those who appeared were Fanny Brice, Capt. Barnett and son, Hattie Burks, Lucille Cavanaugh, Charlotte and the Hippodrome Ice Ballet, Rita Dane, Bernard Granville, Klitty Gordon, Beatrice Herford, Mital Hajos, Ada Meade, George McKay and Otis Arndine, George Primrose and his minstrels, Truly Shattuck, Rose E. Tapley, May Thompson, the steamship Vanderland Band, Bert Williams and Yvette.

Christine Langham not only helped entertain, but announced through Will Rogers an offer of five $5 gold pieces each year to the newsboys who perform the most many acts at the camp. Mr. Burnside was Chairman of the Entertainment Committee. Other members were Charles Dillingham, Henry W. Savage, A. L. Erlanger, Bruce Edwards, Arthur Hammerstein, Marcus Loew, Lee Shubert, J. J. Shubert, Paul Keith, Elizabeth Marbury, Martin Beck, E. F. Albee, F. Ziegfeld Jr., Ray Constock and J. Stuart Blackton. The performance was given under the joint auspices of the New York theatrical managers and newspapers.

AN IMPOSSIBLE PROPOSITION.

(From the Chicago Herald.) A Chicago woman has been noted since girlhood for her ready wit. The other day a young amateur humorist exclaimed in her presence: "What could be more dreadful for a woman than, after mending her husband's coat to find in one of the pockets a love letter from another woman?"

"Fortunately," she said, "that could never happen. The woman would find the letter first and then she would not mend the coat."

ESTATE WINS BACK PAY OF POLICEMAN WHO DIED WHILE UNDER CHARGES

Appellate Court Holds Flynn Had to Be Considered Innocent Till Tried.

The Court of Appeals in an opinion written by Justice Seabury, concurred in by five Associate Justices, reiterates that a man arrested or indicted for crime is presumed to be innocent until he is convicted.

William H. Flynn, a policeman of this city, was arrested March 11, 1914, and indicted, charged with shooting a citizen. Flynn was immediately suspended from duty and at his request, his trial before the Police Commissioner for infraction of the rules of the Police Department was deferred until his trial on the indictment was concluded. Upon the latter trial, the jury disagreed. A retrial was set for April, 1915, and during the proceedings, Flynn was taken ill and died.

Flynn's administrator thereupon brought suit to recover Flynn's salary from the time of his suspension to the day of his death. This suit was opposed by Police Commissioner Woods upon the ground that the trial of Flynn before him had been adjourned at Flynn's own request. In support of this view, Commissioner Woods put in evidence Section 292 of the Greater New York Charter, which provides as follows: "He (the Police Commissioner) shall have power to suspend without pay, pending the trial of charges, any member of the police force. If any member of the police force so suspended shall not be convicted by the Police Commissioner of the charges so preferred he shall be entitled to full pay from the date of suspension notwithstanding such charges and suspension."

This contention was upheld by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, which held the Flynn claim was not within the spirit of the meaning of the section of the charter. In overruling this decision, the Court of Appeals says: "During the police officer's suspension, nothing transpired which destroyed the presumption of the innocence of the accused officer. Upon the date of his death he was, in the eyes of the law, innocent of any offense, and had been suspended from duty, not for any fault upon his own part, but merely because an undetermined charge was pending against him."

Evening World Thrift Campaign

THIS COUPLE INDEPENDENT ON SAVINGS OF $1,800 INCOME

Woman Left Widow With Two Children and $20 Now a Real Estate Broker and Soon to Have Bungalow.

Thrift in some cases merely means picking up the loose ends and making capital of resources ordinarily wasted; in others, it means the utilizing of every means at hand in order to meet actual needs and to provide food and shelter. To-day's letters illustrate both.

Thrift of a high order is shown by this budget:

Brooklyn.
To the Thrift Editor of The Evening World:
We did not start housekeeping till six months ago, although married four years. We have kept close account of all expenses; my figures are not theories but based upon actual expenses, even though but for six months. My policies are not new, one being in force four years and the other eight. We have so far followed our plan of putting $25 in the savings bank each month. The savings fund is now ten years old (it was an organizer of it; it is an established institution of the Equitable Life Society now). I paid in $60 last year and received back $77.
"Salary, $1,800 per year. Household expenditures—Rent, $420; food, $420; gas and electricity, $75; laundry, $15; total, $935. Personal expenditures—Clothing (wife), $115; clothing (myself), $115; dues, $20; total, $250. Entertainment, education, recreation, $50; church and charity, $25. Total, all expenditures, $1,245.
"Savings and insurance—Savings fund, $50; Emigrant Savings Bank, $100; Brooklyn Savings Bank, $200; insurance premiums, $167.44. Total, $527.44.
The budget shows an excellent distribution of a $1,800 income, with plenty of cash savings and apparently ample insurance. It is interesting to note that actual living, or household expenses, amount practically to one-half of the income. With that portion set aside and made sufficient for those specific needs, it is easy to see how so much can be devoted to savings and insurance.
Here is a heroic experience of a woman whom thrift seems certain to reward.

New York.
To the Thrift Editor of The Evening World:
Seven years ago I found myself alone to support two children, four and six years old. I had only $20. Now I wanted to make good some day so this is how I started and succeeded. I got a job as office clerk at $5 per week, making a store and taking in washing for about $2.50 per week. I also took a janitor's job, leaving me only $7 rent to pay. As the apartment next to mine was vacant I rented it for $10, furnished it, and sublet it at $4 per week. I made good, so to-day I run fourteen furnished apartments, clearing net profit $60 per month and no rent to pay.
"I next bought a lot on the installment plan, paying $400 at a beach resort and $15 a month. Last year I got the deed. My aim is to have a bungalow for me and my two children, and I have made up my mind to have a bank account of $500 before I invest any more money. We are well clothed and nourished, and never have food and we have our amusements. My children will soon be able to help me and then I shall feel that I have made good. AMBITIOUS.
There is little room for doubt as to whether this woman is making good. Left a widow with two children and $20 in money, and she has made a home, and now is making money as a real estate broker. Her record thus far gives assurance that she will be able to save a small amount each week. As an evidence of the scale on which she is operating she has sent a receipt for $142.50, covering a single month's rent for two apartments which she sub-leases.

GROUNDWORK OF COMFORT
STARTED ON $14 SALARY.
Good fortune happened along at the earliest time to make the wife's experience turn out happily, but the groundwork was built on thrift.
"To the Thrift Editor of The Evening World:
I have been deeply interested in reading your Thrift letters, and thought the following would be interesting to Evening World readers: We got married in 1909, ages respectively twenty-two and twenty-three years; salary $11.50 per week. "Second year—Salary, $14 per week; rent $14 per month in good old-fashioned semi-improved house. My wife got tired of getting rent receipts only for our money and started to save a small amount each week. At the end of the year she had $50. Wages at end of second year $15.
"Third year—Had to move into suburbs on account of baby's health. Rented old-fashioned house, no improvements of any kind; rent $15. Here we had our own chickens and vegetable garden, which helped. At end of third year had saved another $50. Couldn't save much fourth year on account of sickness and arrival of our second baby.
"At the end of the fourth year had chance to buy a good seven room house on easy terms, viz: $1,800, $500 of which would stay on first mortgage, balance to be paid $100 a week and $15 per month, exclusive of taxes, interest, &c.
"Had to borrow $50 from employer to meet second half of baby's health, $100 on first payment. Cleared installment mortgage off in five years and fifteen days ($1,000) by careful economy, as follows: Wages now $17.50 per week. Took $5 to bank each week, $1.50 lunch and coffee for myself, $1.50 household, food, &c., and paid part of the bill in to pay $50 borrowed, which was paid back in three months.
"My wife did all her own work, made her own clothes, and the children's clothing, and our table was always of the best.
"Lived in house over ten years and $550. This year's interest I did not get on my bank book as yet. I expect to start a home for working girls on a small scale. I know you will wish me God speed.

A HARD-WORKING WOMAN.

This letter recounts the really heroic experiences of a working woman whose principal thought was to keep her little family together in comfort. Such an ambition has fired many a mother to work and sacrifice, but few have acquitted themselves with so much credit. In four years she has enabled her two boys to get an education and then to work, and in that short time she has saved nearly $600. The interest to her credit on her deposits will undoubtedly bring the amount well above that mark. It must be a pleasure for these boys to take good care of such a mother when she needs their help.

Deputy Weeks Barred.
The funeral of the late Deputy Fire Commissioner W. Holden Weeks, who died suddenly Friday afternoon, was held to-day. Services at noon in St. James Protestant Episcopal Church, Madison Avenue and Seventy-first Street were conducted by the Rev. Frederick W. Crowder. Mayor Mitchel and other city officials were present. Four Deputy Chiefs of the department acted as honorary pall bearers.
